Legally, Cyprus is part of the European Union, but it is 100 km from Syria and Lebanon, and 1300 km from the countries of the Persian Gulf. What determines the location of the capital? The name Cyprus comes from the Latin name for copper — cuprum; this country is famous for its rich copper mines. The capital Nicosia, founded around the 11th—7th centuries BC, during its existence belonged to the Greeks, crusaders, Venetians, Turks, and the British, whose influence is reflected in the unusual architecture of the city. Nicosia experienced its greatest flourishing during the time of the Venetian Republic in the 15th—16th centuries — it was then that the fortress walls and eleven city bastions were built. The name of which city, located in the middle of the southern coast of Cyprus, translates as “Middle City”?
